Magical Mystery Tour

What do you do if you win the lottery? It's a question that has led to much idle speculation and daydreaming—but odds are that even in your wildest dreams, you didn't imagine spending your lottery money the way Nick Hammond and Anastasia Collins have!

Nick and Anastasia are the central characters of Steve Niles & Fiona Staples' Mystery Society, a new limited series from IDW based on a concept co-created by Steve Niles & Ashley Wood. "Nick and Anastasia are a couple who used to run an esoteric bookstore, dealing with books on everything from Bigfoot and UFO's to government conspiracies and all manner of supernatural," Niles said. "They are very much in love and when they win the lottery they devote their newfound fortune to forming The Mystery Society, a group dedicated to debunking lies, uncovering true mysteries and monsters and recruiting and/or rescuing the outcasts of the world."

"This book is a conspiracy-theorist cum monster-fan's dream!" IDW Senior Editor Bob Schreck said. "Steve and Ashley's concept 'Brundle-Flies' Nick and Nora from The Thin Man with a sort of Scully and Mulder from the X-Files as this well-to-do duo run the gamut exposing the truth behind 'real life' conspiracies and all things that go bump in the night. And Fiona's contribution is amazing as anyone who has seen her work will tell you. Best thing for us is… she's bringing it to a whole new level with this series."

The suave, charming and slightly rogueish adventurer couple is a tried-and-true concept in mystery and adventure fiction; are there any particular influences for Nick And Anastasia? "There are a couple," Niles said. "I love the old Thin Man movies with Dick Powell and Myrna Loy. The dynamic between them was a real influence. There's just something really great about seeing a functioning, loving couple at work or play. I think it's something we all want and strive for so it's very relatable. And I did it once before in the original 30 Days of Night comic. Unlike the film, Eben and Stella are very much in love and a team throughout the story."

Like Nick and Nora Charles of the Thin Man adventures, these characters are quite well off financially. Is that an important aspect of the story? "Well, it helps them in the way that it helps Bruce Wayne be a better Batman," Niles said. "They have endless resources and they have lots of gadgets. While Nick and Nora were able to sustain a somewhat decadent lifestyle, our couple uses their wealth to make the Mystery Society stronger. Of course, they do indulge themselves, too..."

Some have compared Mystery Society to television series such as Fringe and X-Files, both of which feature adventurers struggling to uncover the truth behind paranormal and unexplained activities. Are there similarities? "I've never seen Fringe so I can't say, but there are very few similarities to X-Files," Niles explained. "The Mystery Society are more on the side of the paranormal as opposed to treating them/it like criminals. There will be bad monsters, but the Mystery Society are not out to arrest anyone. If anything they will come up against the monsters known as 'humans' much moré."

Unlike the protagonists of X-Files or Fringe, Nick and Anastasia work without the legal protection that goes with being a part of the law enforcement community; how does this affect the way they approach their cases, and how do the legal authorities deal with them? "Without giving away too much, let's just say that the authorities are not amused," Niles said. "It does not bode well for them...but they have a plan."

Are there other members of the Mystery Society, or is a two-person operation? "By the end of the first two issues, the group will grow by four, and those six members will be the core group for this first series. I don't want to give away too much but a character I created way back when, Secret Skull, will join the group."

It's obvious that Niles has a real affection for paranormal investigators; what makes this concept so appealing? "I grew up on Night Stalker, horror movies, and Raymond Chandler. It's just something I love to do. I love doing cops, but real crime kinda bums me out, so I like exploring the fantasy elements combined. Paranormal investigators are like my super-heroes—I see them as having endless possibilities."

Niles is joined on The Mystery Society by artist Fiona Staples; how did she become involved with the project? "Fiona is wonderful, both as a human and an artist. I first saw her work in North 40—which she has been nominated for an Eisner!—and immediately started trying to contact her. I thought Marvel or DC would have scooped her up, but once I spoke to her she said she wanted to do creator-owned and we stated talking about Mystery Society. She's so great. She contributes so much—it's a collaboration in every sense of the word!"

Staples work has a clean, almost Phil-Noto-esque style that seems quite different from the artistic approach on most of Niles' other projects; did you want this bold, clean style for this project, or was just a fortuitous combination of artist and concept? "I definitely have the rep as the dark horror guy, and I don't mind because, well, I am," Niles said. "But I also have love for many, many other genres and art styles. "Mystery Society will have many horror elements, but also SF, mystery, and all sorts of fun weirdness.

"And that's why I feel very fortunate to have found Fiona and I'm grateful for IDW allowing me to try something so radically different. In the past I have definitely sought out the darker artists because it fit the material, but with Mystery Society I knew we needed something brighter and more fun.

"Fiona is amazing. She has an incredible ability with facial expressions and unbelievable comedic timing (if that's the right phrase) which comes into play a lot in Mystery Society.

"I want to be clear, though, that I'm not walking away from horror by any stretch. In fact, Kelley Jones and I are two issues in to a series that may well be the darkest thing either of us has ever done—a series called Edge of Doom. I turned in the script for the third issue last week, and Kelley called to tell me that is was not only the sickest thing I've ever written, but possibly the sickest thing he's ever read."

Mystery Society is launching as a five-part limited series; are there plans to continue the adventures of Nick and Anastasia in future miniseries? "I definitely have plans, but the future of Mystery Society is in the hands of fans and retailers," Niles said. "So far we are receiving a tremendously positive response so I hope Fiona Staples, Ash Wood, and I are able to do many more series in the future."

Mystery Society #1, a $3.99 comic by Steve Niles & Fiona Staples with cover art by Ashley Wood and variant cover art by Staples, is scheduled for mid-May release.

NICK, DARLING?
YES?
IT SEEMS I HAVE AN UNEXPECTED GUEST.
HMMM. SHOULD I COME HOME NOW?
NO, NO. YOU KEEP LOOKING FOR THE GIRLS...
YOU EVER HEAR OF ANSWERING MACHINE MOJO? SO, YOU AND WHAT DO YOU WANT?
I AM HERE TO SEE NICK HASTEY.
I CAN HANDLE THIS.
WELL, I'M HIS WIFE. WE WORK TOGETHER. ANYTHING YOU WANT TO SAY TO HIM, YOU CAN SAY TO ME.
I WILL WAIT FOR NICK.
OH, REALLY?

CRASH! BAM! ARRRRGH!
EVERYTHING OK?
THAT WASN'T ME. I'M FINE.
NOT TO RUSH YOU, HONEY, BUT THE FIRST 48 HOURS ARE GOING TO BE VERY IMPORTANT IF WE WANT TO LOCATE THE SKULL THIEVES.

THIS IS WHY I'VE NEED HELP. I'M SO GLAD WE DECIDED TO RECRUIT.
OH, AND DON'T FORGET WE HAVE DINNER GUESTS TONIGHT.
CRACK! SMASH! HISSSSS!
SHIT. I COMPLETELY FORGOT. MY GOOD SUIT IS STILL AT THE DRY-CLEANERS.
